VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY
Owen Graduate School of Management

Executive Director, Vanderbilt Center for Finance

Leadership Profile

Fall/Winter 2026

WittKieffer

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved. This document contains proprietary and confidential information belonging to WittKieffer. It is intended only for the addressee. Any unauthorized disclosure, copying, or distribution is strictly prohibited without written consent.

Executive Summary

Vanderbilt University invites applications and nominations for the position of Executive Director of the newly established Vanderbilt Center for Finance.

Anchored at the Owen Graduate School of Management (Owen), the Vanderbilt Center for Finance is supported by a transformational $25 million lead commitment and envisioned as the foundation of a broader $50 million fundraising initiative, and represents one of Vanderbilt's most significant investments in undergraduate finance education and an exceptional opportunity for an entrepreneurial leader to build a nationally distinctive program from the ground up.

The Center has an ambitious goal: to position Vanderbilt as a premier destination for undergraduate students pursuing careers in finance. It will bring together an accelerated and rigorous academic finance curriculum, personalized career development, experiential learning, and deep engagement with the global financial community. Serving as a centralized hub for finance at Vanderbilt, the Center will connect classroom learning with applied experiences, professional networks, industry-informed programming, and emerging opportunities across the financial marketplace.

The Executive Director will have the opportunity—and the resources—to turn this vision into reality. The Center's plans contemplate significant investments in new faculty and professional staff, expanded undergraduate finance courses, early-year finance treks, dedicated career and experiential-learning resources, and extensive engagement with alumni, employers, and financial professionals. Vanderbilt also intends to establish an external Advisory Council to help inform the Center's development and strategic direction.

The ideal candidate will be an accomplished, forward-thinking finance leader who combines deep industry knowledge with exceptional leadership and relationship-building capabilities. Intellectual curiosity, strategic vision, professional credibility, entrepreneurial orientation, and demonstrated ability to build relationships, networks, programs, or initiatives will be essential for success. The Executive Director will be a leader who sees this not simply as an opportunity to administer a center, but as an opportunity to build something distinctive and consequential with the potential to influence undergraduate finance education nationally.

Candidates may come from a variety of backgrounds, including senior leadership positions in investment banking, private equity, investment and asset management, financial services, fintech, corporate finance and development, venture capital, public policy or regulation, or related sectors. Candidates with careers combining academic and professional experience are also encouraged to apply. Regardless of background, the successful candidate will possess the credibility to engage senior industry leaders, faculty, alumni, students, and other stakeholders and the ability to connect people and opportunities across traditional organizational boundaries.

Located in Nashville, Tennessee, Vanderbilt University is a growth-minded institution, and Owen is a key player in that strategy. The Center for Finance represents a major expansion of Vanderbilt's commitment to undergraduate finance education. It will build on Vanderbilt's academic strengths, highly talented undergraduate student body, engaged alumni community, and growing relationships with the financial industry to create an integrated pathway connecting rigorous academic preparation with professional development and access to the global financial community.

To submit a nomination or express personal interest in this position, please see Procedure for Candidacy at the end of this document.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Role of the Executive Director

The Executive Director will provide overall leadership for the Center, setting its mission, vision, strategic direction, organizational structure, and intellectual agenda. Reporting to the Senior Associate Dean for Academic Programs and working closely with Owen's Dean, finance faculty, university leadership, students, alumni, and external partners, the Executive Director will shape the Center's priorities, programs, organizational structure, partnerships, and external identity; convene faculty, students, alumni, and industry leaders; and cultivate senior-level relationships across the financial sector.

The Executive Director will work closely with Career Advancement and Engagement (CAE), including the Senior Director of the Finance Career Pathway at Vanderbilt and dedicated finance industry-engagement professionals, to translate the Center's strategic and academic priorities into expanded opportunities for students. This collaboration will connect the Center's work with career development, employer engagement, experiential learning, student preparation, and market intelligence, while complementing CAE's employer and recruiting relationships and the ongoing industry relationship and business development led by dedicated finance professionals, particularly in New York.

This is fundamentally a builder's role. The Executive Director will help recruit and develop the team necessary to execute the Center's mission; work with faculty and School leadership to advance an accelerated and rigorous undergraduate finance curriculum; help develop innovative academic and experiential programs; and determine how the Center's substantial resources can be deployed to achieve the greatest impact for students and Vanderbilt.

A central priority will be building a vibrant and increasingly self-reinforcing Vanderbilt finance network. The Executive Director will cultivate and steward relationships with leading financial institutions, senior executives, alumni, parents, employers, and other influential professionals and activate those relationships in ways that benefit the Center and its students. The Executive Director will engage alumni and industry leaders as advisers, mentors, speakers, recruiters, collaborators, and champions for Vanderbilt and build multidimensional partnerships with leading organizations across the financial sector.

The Executive Director will lead the development of innovative programming that connects academic learning, career preparation, experiential opportunities, and industry practice. Potential initiatives include conferences and symposia, executive and practitioner engagement, employer-sponsored projects, industry visits and treks, mentoring programs, distinguished speakers, student competitions, research collaborations, and other experiences that bring students into meaningful engagement with the financial community.

The Executive Director will work closely with dedicated career and industry-engagement professionals to strengthen Vanderbilt's relationships with key financial institutions and expand opportunities for students in finance, banking, investment banking, private equity, investment management, and related sectors. An important focus will be deepening Vanderbilt's connections within the New York financial community while building relationships with leading financial organizations and professionals nationally and globally.

The Executive Director will also help create stronger connections between Vanderbilt faculty and the practice of finance by identifying industry leaders, organizations, data, emerging questions, and potential collaborators who can contribute to courses, seminars, conferences, research discussions, and other academic experiences.

The Executive Director will maintain a deep understanding of developments across the financial industry and bring current market intelligence and practitioner perspectives into the Center and the School. The successful candidate should be able to identify emerging trends and opportunities, anticipate how financial markets and the finance profession are evolving, and translate those developments into programs and experiences that keep Vanderbilt at the forefront of finance education and industry engagement.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Above all, the Executive Director should be a builder who can translate relationships and resources into durable programs, networks, and opportunities—creating a virtuous cycle in which students, alumni, faculty, employers, and industry leaders increasingly contribute to and benefit from the Center.

The Executive Director will play a central role in determining how the Center's substantial financial resources can be deployed to maximize its long-term impact. Working with School leadership and faculty, and engaging with the Center's Advisory Council, the Director will develop investment priorities, establish measures of success, and assess the effectiveness of the Center's programs and initiatives. Success will be reflected in the quality and reach of the Center's academic and experiential programs; the strength of its relationships with industry leaders, employers, alumni, and other partners; expanded opportunities and outcomes for students; the depth of practitioner engagement with faculty and students; and the Center's growing national reputation.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Opportunities and Expectations for Leadership

"Finance plays a consequential role in shaping businesses, markets and economies, and Vanderbilt has an important role to play in preparing the next generation of leaders in the field. This extraordinary gift will give our students the rigorous education, practical experience and early preparation they need to succeed in finance—and, over the course of their careers, to help shape its future."

- Chancellor Daniel Diermeier

As an inaugural leader, the Executive Director will inherit an extraordinary opportunity to build rather than merely manage. The Center is in its formative stages, with plans for additional staffing, expanded programming, advisory structures, and increased national visibility. The challenge will be balancing long-term vision with immediate action. The Executive Director must develop systems, partnerships, and programs that can scale over time while capitalizing on the significant momentum already surrounding finance education and career preparation at Vanderbilt. As such, the Executive Director will be expected to address the following interrelated leadership opportunities.

Establish the Center's strategic, cohesive vision and identity.

The new Executive Director will have the opportunity to define what success looks like for the newly established Vanderbilt Center for Finance and shape its long-term identity within the university and the broader finance ecosystem. By bringing together academic enrichment, career advising, and industry engagement, the Center will create a coordinated path from the classroom to the workplace. While the Center was created to strengthen pathways into finance careers, the Executive Director will be expected to assess emerging trends across financial services, identify future opportunities for students, and develop a roadmap that positions Vanderbilt as a leading source of talent for a broad spectrum of finance-related careers.

This is a role for a builder who can move quickly, establish priorities, create operational discipline, and translate ideas into execution. Equally important will be the creation of a coherent vision that brings together existing programs, resources, and constituents. The Executive Director will need to translate significant institutional momentum into a clear strategy that aligns academic, co-curricular, and employer-facing activities into a distinctive Vanderbilt model.

Build deep and enduring industry relationships.

A central responsibility of the role will be to strengthen Vanderbilt's position in the finance industry and expand its network of employer partnerships. The Executive Director must be able to engage credibly with senior executives, alumni leaders, and employers to develop opportunities for internships, experiential learning, and mentoring; serve as a visible ambassador for Vanderbilt in key markets such as New York and beyond; establish relationships with leading firms; identify emerging players in the marketplace; and further elevate Vanderbilt's status as a target institution for finance recruiting. The next leader will be expected to build on gains in finance placement outcomes through programs such as Vandy 2 Wall Street, and help secure Vanderbilt's place among the institutions most sought after by finance employers.

An important component of this effort will be establishing an Advisory Council. Working with Development and Alumni Relations (DAR) and Career Advancement and Engagement (CAE), the Executive Director will help to stand up a group of individuals who are committed to investing in the Center's future, will assist in informing the Center's development and strategic direction, host events, and provide internship and networking opportunities.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Create a nationally recognized student experience for finance.

The Vanderbilt Center for Finance aims to position Vanderbilt as a premier destination for undergraduate students pursuing careers in finance by creating an undergraduate experience that connects rigorous academic learning with connectivity to the leading financial organizations on Wall Street and beyond. The Executive Director will be charged with developing innovative programs that prepare students to compete successfully for highly sought-after careers in finance. A defining feature will be earlier, more structured exposure to finance – for example, programming for first- and second-year students that helps them build foundational knowledge well ahead of recruiting deadlines. Seminars covering industry knowledge and skills, tailored advising, applied learning, and alumni engagement will become a signature strength of the undergraduate experience and enable Vanderbilt to become a destination for students seeking preparation, networks, and opportunities to launch careers at the highest levels of finance.

Advance finance education and thought leadership.

At Vanderbilt, the study of finance is truly trans-institutional and complements the university's liberal arts ethos. The finance minor attracts students from over 60 majors, making the Center uniquely positioned to create opportunities for shared learning, meaningful engagement, and collective impact. The Executive Director will play a key role in expanding curriculum-related offerings, supporting faculty initiatives, identifying emerging areas in finance, and convening conversations among academics and industry leaders to bridge finance practice and the university's academic enterprise. By convening executives, alumni, scholars, and practitioners, the Executive Director can help position Vanderbilt as a respected voice in discussions about the future of finance and talent development.

Foster collaboration across a complex university environment.

The Center's success will depend on productive relationships with the Career Center, faculty in the Owen Graduate School of Management, DAR, and other academic units. The Executive Director will be a leader who is collaborative, relationship-oriented, and focused on outcomes rather than ownership or credit. The Executive Director will need to navigate overlapping responsibilities, build trust among diverse constituencies, and foster a shared sense of purpose. This will require diplomacy, patience, and the ability to bring people together around common goals while respecting Vanderbilt’s culture and governance structures. Success is likely to come through influence and partnership more than formal authority.

Leverage philanthropic investment and demonstrate impact.

The creation of the Center is backed by a transformative philanthropic investment and is accompanied by ambitious growth expectations. While the Executive Director is not expected to serve as the principal fundraiser, they will play a critical role in articulating the Center’s vision, demonstrating its impact to donors and supporters, and partnering with DAR to cultivate philanthropic support. The Executive Director will therefore need to be a careful steward of resources, ensuring that investments produce meaningful outcomes for students and the institution. By delivering visible early successes, cultivating engagement among alumni and parent networks, and helping shape the Center's next phase of growth, the leader can lay the foundation for a durable, nationally prominent program.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Professional Qualifications and Personal Qualities

The Owen Graduate School of Management seeks an accomplished, forward-thinking finance leader who combines deep industry knowledge with exceptional leadership and relationship-building capabilities to serve as its inaugural Executive Director of the Vanderbilt Center for Finance.

The successful candidate will be an accomplished finance leader with a distinguished record of achievement and leadership within the financial sector, coupled with the ability to translate professional expertise into innovative academic, student, and industry-facing initiatives. Candidates should possess an MBA, PhD, or other relevant graduate degree from a highly regarded institution.

The ideal candidate will also have many of the following professional and personal characteristics:

- Significant Finance Leadership Experience: Substantial experience and demonstrated success in one or more areas of finance, including investment banking, private equity, investment or asset management, corporate finance and development, venture capital, financial services, fintech, or related sectors. Experience in senior leadership roles within prominent financial institutions, investment firms, or corporations will be highly valued.

- Executive-Level Influence and Engagement: A proven record of advising, managing, or partnering with sophisticated organizations and senior executives. Credibility, professional stature, and strategic perspective necessary to engage effectively with leaders across the financial industry.

- Deep Understanding of the Finance Industry: Comprehensive understanding of the financial services landscape, including its institutions, professional culture, talent expectations, recruiting trends, and emerging opportunities and challenges. Insight into how the industry is evolving and how academic programs can prepare future leaders for success.

- Academic and Industry Fluency: Ability to navigate seamlessly between the worlds of finance and higher education. Ability to engage credibly with industry practitioners while working effectively within an academic environment that values collaboration, innovation, and student development.

- Entrepreneurial Builder: A visionary and entrepreneurial leader with a demonstrated capacity to create and grow impactful programs, initiatives, and partnerships. Possesses the strategic judgment to leverage institutional resources and translate them into opportunities that generate lasting value for students, faculty, alumni, and industry partners.

- Capacity to Build Networks and Relationships: A track record of cultivating professional and alumni networks, establishing relationships with leading firms and industry executives, and creating meaningful connections across constituencies. Ability to serve as a connector who strengthens engagement between academia and the finance profession.

- Talent Developer and Mentor: Demonstrates a commitment to developing future leaders. Experience mentoring emerging talent, creating pathways for professional growth, and fostering environments where students and young professionals can thrive.

- Collaborative and Relationship-Oriented Leader: Exceptional interpersonal and communication skills are critical to success in this role. An effective collaborator who builds trust, works across organizational boundaries, and brings together diverse stakeholders to pursue shared goals.

- Intellectual Curiosity and Sound Judgment: A leader who combines intellectual curiosity with practical wisdom and strategic thinking. Judgment to identify emerging opportunities, adapt to changing industry dynamics, and advance initiatives that strengthen the Center's impact and reputation.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

About Vanderbilt University / Owen Graduate School of Management

Overview

The Vanderbilt University Owen Graduate School of Management, known as Vanderbilt Business, is a business school embedded in a world-renowned research university, with a mission of creating opportunities to discover, grow, and thrive in business and beyond.

Founded in 1969 as the Graduate School of Management, the school began with 10 students and 10 faculty members in a renovated funeral home. It was renamed in 1977 in honor of Ralph "Peck" Owen, a former chairman of American Express, and his wife, Lulu Hampton Owen.

The AACSB-accredited school is located in Nashville, Tennessee, one of the fastest-growing metropolitan areas in the U.S. and a thriving hub for healthcare, real estate, and music and entertainment. The city's dynamic business community offers students abundant opportunities for experiential learning, and more than 500 recruiting relationships connect them with leading companies in Nashville and around the world. The school is also growing beyond Nashville, with a presence at Vanderbilt's New York City campus and a future West Palm Beach campus.

Vanderbilt Business offers programs for every career stage, including Full-Time MBA, Evening MBA, Executive MBA, MS in Finance, MS in Marketing, Master of Accountancy, Master of Management, Master of Management in Health Care, and MS in Business and Technology. The school manages the Hoogland Undergraduate Business Program, a business minor that pairs business fundamentals with electives from Vanderbilt's four undergraduate schools. It also offers the Accelerator® Summer Business Immersion for undergraduates and provides open-enrollment and custom Executive Education programs for individuals and organizations.

The school is home to the Center for Entrepreneurship, elevated by a $20 million gift in 2025; the Undergraduate Center for Finance, established in 2026 with a $25 million gift; the Hans Stoll Financial Markets Research Center; and the Center for Social Ventures.

Currently, Vanderbilt Business serves more than 600 graduate students and more than 1,200 students in the Hoogland Undergraduate Business Program. It is supported by a global community of more than 13,000 alumni in 101 countries.

Mission

Creating opportunities to discover, grow, and thrive in business and beyond.

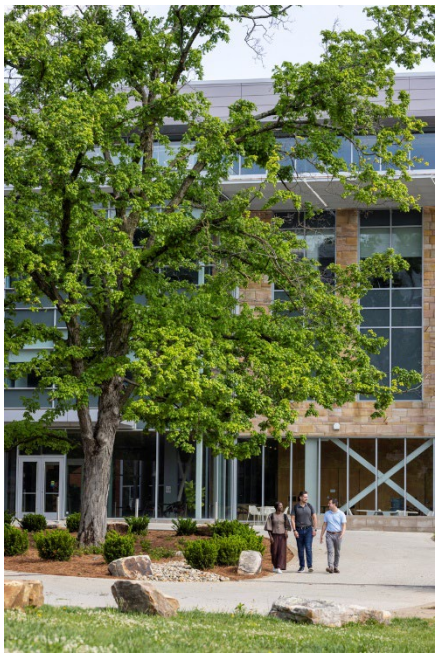

The mission statement embodies the art of becoming and is both aspirational and true to Owen's identity. The mission acknowledges the importance of conventional forms of discovery, such as scholarly research, intellectual curiosity, and curricular learning. Yet, it equally celebrates the distinct facets of the human experience, characterized by the desire to connect with others, to find meaning in our work and relationships, and to create something new.

Transformation lies at the core of our mission. Owen is a hub where opportunities abound, doors open, and community members are inspired to embark on journeys of personal and intellectual growth. Owen encourages individuals to embrace courage as they navigate paths of discovery and strive to realize their fullest potential.

Owen has been instrumental in transforming the lives of individuals, enabling them to thrive. The impact of

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Owen's work resonates deeply and personally with everyone involved with the organization. Their experiences capture why Owen is dedicated to its mission.

Values

Self-Direction

- Choosing your own path.

Growth

- Seeking mastery.

Belonging

- Developing meaningful relationships.

Collaboration

- Challenging and supporting each other to reach new heights.

Executive Education and Certificate Programs

Owen offers transformative programs that help professionals build valuable skills and elevate their careers. More than 8,000 executives across industries and functions have developed and sharpened their skills through Owen's programming, which includes:

- Programs for Individuals
- Custom Solutions
- Certificate of Excellence Leadership
- Certificates

Owen has partnered with over 100 organizations to develop custom programs for their high-potential employees, including AllianceBernstein, Bridgestone Americas, Nissan, ITT, Cardinal Health, and Dollar General.

The average age of an Executive Education participant is 39. Participants range from rising managers to C-suite executives; from small business owners to executives of large corporate boards. More than 10% of Executive Education participants live outside the United States.

Approximately 30 professors and presenters are involved in delivering Executive Education programs. They include both distinguished Vanderbilt faculty members and veteran industry practitioners.

Alumni

Owen graduates go on to impact a wide range of fields – from healthcare to technology, from finance to social entrepreneurship. Owen's alumni community of over 12,000 individuals is always eager to help those following in their footsteps.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Owen Graduate School of Management Leadership

Tom Steenburgh, Ralph Owen Dean and Professor of Marketing

Dean Steenburgh is an expert in business-to-business marketing and sales. He believes in the power of collaboration between academics and business leaders to explore novel research ideas and solve real-world problems.

Awards & Accomplishments

Dean Steenburgh is a member of the Senior Advisory Board of the Journal of Personal Selling and Sales Management. He served on the editorial board of Marketing Science, was an Associate Editor of the Journal of Business-to-Business Marketing, and is an ad hoc reviewer for academic articles published in high-impact sales and marketing journals.

Leadership

Before coming to Owen, Dean Steenburgh served as the Richard S. Reynolds Professor and Senior Associate Dean of the Full-Time Program at the Darden School of Business. He had previously served as the Senior Associate Dean of Faculty Development and the Senior Associate Dean of Executive Education and Lifelong Learning, and he was the course head for first-year marketing. Before joining Darden, he was on the faculty at the Harvard Business School, where he developed electives and led executive education courses in business-to-business marketing and sales. Dean Steenburgh is a co-founder of the Thought Leadership on the Sales Profession conference, a unique event that brings together leading academics and senior business leaders to discuss cutting-edge ideas and practices in sales.

Publications

Dean Steenburgh's research has been recognized with the Neil Rackham Research Award for its long-term impact on sales practice. His article "Adding Bricks to Clicks: Predicting the Patterns of Cross-Channel Elasticities over Time" won the Louis W. Stern Award for making a significant contribution to the literature on marketing and channels of distribution. Has written articles for the Harvard Business Review on sales compensation and selling new products, and his HBR article "Motivating Salespeople: What Really Works" won the Wachovia Prize for Research Excellence. Dean Steenburgh has written numerous case studies that are taught in leading business schools around the world. His case study on HubSpot won the Case Center Award and is part of the HBS Premier Case Collection and the Case Center Classic Case Collection.

Research Interests

Dean Steenburgh's research analyzes the effectiveness of sales and marketing strategies. His work has shed light on topics such as whether lump-sum bonuses motivate salespeople to work harder or play timing games with their orders and whether firms should use sales and marketing actions to manage their earnings. He frequently speaks about his research at academic and company-sponsored conferences. He has been a featured speaker at conferences run by the Sales Management Association, the Strategic Accounts Management Association, the Marketing Science Institute, the Institute for the Study of Business Markets, the Money Management Institute, and Siemens One.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Jennifer Edson Escalas, Senior Associate Dean of Academic Programs

Professor of Marketing, Samuel B. and Evelyn R. Richmond Chair in Management

Jennifer Escalas brings a unique blend of academic and private sector experience to the classroom, helping students understand how to build meaning for brands.

Awards & Accomplishments

Professor Escalas has won Outstanding Reviewer Awards from the Journal of Consumer Psychology and the Journal of Consumer Research, as well as the Distinguished Service Award from The Society for Consumer Psychology. She has also won the Dean's Research Productivity and Dean's Research Impact Awards at Owen.

Publications

Professor Escalas' research has been featured in several prominent marketing journals, including the Journal of Consumer Research, the Journal of Consumer Psychology, the Journal of Advertising, and the Journal of Public Policy and Marketing. She has contributed chapters to 10 books.

Teaching

Professor Escalas teaches in the MBA, Executive MBA, and Master's in Marketing programs, including Consumer Insights for Marketing Decision Making, Statistics for Marketing, and Marketing Strategy.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Nashville, Tennessee

As the hub for several booming industries, the home to a global community—including the nation's largest Kurdish population—and "America's friendliest city" according to Travel + Leisure magazine, Nashville blends history and hospitality with a rich mix of traditions and ongoing growth. Tennessee's capital is also an international destination for the arts, entrepreneurship, and scientific research, thereby attracting world-renowned scholars to Vanderbilt and the broader community. In turn, it's no surprise that many students choose to call Music City home, even after their time as Vanderbilt students comes to an end.

Nashville's dining scene has grown dramatically in the past decade and is now regularly included on "best-of" lists by publications such as Bon Appétit, Travel + Leisure, and Southern Living. Home to several award-winning restaurants and chefs, the city's ever-expanding food options include cuisines from around the world, as well as signature dishes like Nashville hot chicken and other Southern classics.

Nashville offers many opportunities to enjoy the great outdoors, with more than 100 stand-alone parks and a quick drive to the Great Smoky Mountains. Across the street from Vanderbilt's campus, Centennial Park comprises 132 acres of green space and paved trails, as well as a bandshell, dog park, and other attractions. Centennial Park also has a rich history as the host site for the Tennessee Centennial Exposition and for Nashville's Parthenon, a full-scale replica of the classical Greek temple. The structure was built in 1897 to celebrate the city's reputation as the "Athens of the South"—a nickname earned through Nashville's progressive dedication to higher education and the exchange of intellectual ideas.

Industry

Major industries include tourism, printing and publishing, technology manufacturing, music production, higher education, finance, insurance, automobile production, and health care management. Nashville has been named one of the 15 best U.S. cities for work and family by Fortune magazine, was ranked as the No. 1 most popular U.S. city for corporate relocations by Expansion Management magazine, and was named by Forbes magazine as one of the 25 cities most likely to have the country's highest job growth over the coming five years.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

History

Settled in 1779 along the banks of the Cumberland River, Nashville became Tennessee's state capital in 1843. Just 30 years later, Vanderbilt University was founded—marking the start of an enduring relationship between a dynamic Southern city and a world-class research institution.

Climate

Nashville's climate is often characterized as mild, with colder winters and high summer temperatures. Most of the city's rain occurs during the spring, and if snowfall does occur, it's seldom heavy. Campus life at Vanderbilt benefits tremendously from the city's temperate weather, as outdoor activities can typically occur throughout the academic year.

Transportation

While several restaurants and cultural attractions are within easy walking distance of Vanderbilt's campus, ride-hailing services such as Uber and Lyft are also widely available throughout Nashville.

For getting in and out of the city, the award-winning Nashville International Airport offers nonstop flights to 75 destinations, including Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, London, Los Angeles, and Washington, D.C.

Neighborhoods

Each of the city's neighborhoods carries its own identity and benefits. The Vanderbilt campus is located approximately 1.5 miles southwest of downtown in the West End neighborhood of midtown Nashville. Among the closest neighboring areas are Music Row—often considered the heart and historic center of Nashville's recording industry—and Hillsboro Village, a pedestrian-friendly area filled with shopping, restaurants, and bars.

Click here for an introduction to Nashville, including information about arts and culture, food and dining, shopping, and the outdoors.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved

Procedure for Candidacy

All applications, nominations, and inquiries are invited. Applications should include, as separate documents, a CV or resume and a letter of interest addressing the themes in this profile.

WittKieffer is assisting Vanderbilt University Owen Graduate School of Management in this search, which will remain open until an appointment is made.

Application materials should be submitted using WittKieffer's Candidate Portal. Nominations and inquiries can be directed to:

Shelley Arakawa, J.D., and Maya Holt-Brockenbrough, Ph.D.

VanderbiltBusiness-Finance@wittkieffer.com

Vanderbilt University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer. Women, minorities, people with disabilities, and protected veterans are encouraged to apply.

© WittKieffer. All rights reserved